At a glance

Players: 2–6 champions. Length: 6 rounds of 6 seconds.

Goal: win the crowd. After 6 rounds the fighter with the most glory wins, unless one champion is left standing first.

How the fight works: every second you secretly choose a card, everyone reveals at once, and the cards you played pile up on your burn-down track, where they keep acting until they burn off.

How to use this book

Learning to play? Read through Water, Glory and Crawling, then play. That's the basic game.

Ready for more? Advanced Rules offers weapon arcs, shield arcs and corner rally, each optional.

Mid-game question? The FAQ, the card reference and the quick reference on the back page answer most of them, so the fight rarely has to stop.

Welcome to the Arena

Sanguis et Harena: blood and sand. You are a champion fighter in the arenas of ancient Rome. Win the crowd. Stay alive.

Every weapon, guard and footstep in this game is drawn from historical gladiatorial combat. The fighting is knife-close and split-second: each second, every player commits one card at the same moment, and nobody can take it back.

The cards you play don't vanish. They land on your burn-down track and keep acting for one, two or three seconds while newer cards pile on top. Stack them well and you get wicked combos: a triple strike still swinging while you shove your opponent into the sand.

Water fuels every move, blood keeps you in the fight, and glory is how you win. Spend water too fast and you'll be crawling to the arena wall while the crowd jeers.

How to Win

Entertain the crowd. After 6 rounds, the fighter with the most glory wins.

Glory

You score glory when your cards succeed: an attack card when its attack lands, a defense card when it stops an attack, a flourish when you play it. The crowd also rewards holding the center of the arena and punishes hiding at its edge. Water, Glory and Crawling has the full list.

Elimination

If your blood reaches zero, you're eliminated, unless you still have your second wind: once per bout, lethal damage leaves you at half your maximum blood instead (rounded down, minimum 1).

If only one champion is left standing, that champion wins immediately.

Ties

If two or more fighters tie on glory after 6 rounds, the one with more blood wins. If they're still tied, the one with more water wins.

Components

Each player brings their own deck. The arena and tracking pieces are shared.

Each player's deck: 46 cards

Cards	Count	What they are
Action cards	23	Moves, attacks, defenses, flourishes and hybrids. You play these, one per second.
Arma (gear) cards	9	Weapons, shields and armor. You equip these at setup; you don't play them.
Champion cards	4	Rufus, Vela, Cassius and Drusa. You pick one.
Player aid cards	10	Reminders of the sequence of play and the key rules.

Shared pieces

- The arena board. The small map (37 hexes) for 2–4 players, the large map (61 hexes) for 5–6.
- Player mats and cubes for tracking water, blood and glory, with your burn-down track.
- A figure or meeple per fighter to mark your position.

Reading a card

Where	What it shows
Top left: fire icons	Heat: 1, 2 or 3. How many seconds the card stays on your burn-down track.
Top center: name	The Latin title, with the familiar name beneath it, as in Punctim (Stab).
Top right: water drops	The card's water cost, paid when you play the card.
Bottom left: type	MOVE, ATTACK, DEFEND, FLOURISH, or a hybrid such as MOVE/ATTACK.
Bottom right: star	Glory: 1 star or none. Scored each time the card succeeds.
Footer	What the card does. Hybrids show one action per column: Prosilire (Lunge) moves in the 2-heat column, then attacks in the 1-heat column.

Setup

Setup takes a few minutes. Pick a champion, arm them, and walk out onto the sand.

1. Build the arena. Use the small map for 2–4 players or the large map for 5–6.
2. Pick a champion. Each player chooses one of the four champion cards from their own deck. Two players may pick the same champion.
3. Set your tracks. Put your water and blood markers on your champion's starting values. Glory starts at 0.
4. Choose your Arma (gear): weapons and shields for your hands, armor for your arm and head (see below).
5. Pompa. Announce your champion and Arma (gear) to the crowd.
6. Take your places. Place the fighters on opposite sides of the arena.
7. Pick a starting player at random. They take the first player marker.

Your Arma (gear)

Your Arma (gear) is chosen at setup, not drawn or played. Your weapons decide how much blood your attacks spill; your shields and armor block attacks.

- Hands: a weapon or a shield in each, in any mix: two weapons, weapon and shield, or the rete in either hand.
- Arm: the manica, or nothing.
- Head: one helmet, the galea or the cassis, or nothing.

Every piece of Arma (gear) costs water upkeep at the start of each round. Heavy kit protects you but drains you; you can shed any piece before paying.

Arma (gear)	Kind	Upkeep	Notes
Gladius	Weapon	0	Range 1. Rome's short sword.
Sica	Weapon	1	Range 1. Once per round, your attacks ignore shield cover.
Trident	Weapon	1	Range 2 only.
Rete (net)	Weapon	1	Range 1 or 2. Once per round, a hit knocks the target prone.
Scutum	Shield	2	Tower shield. Falls off at 4 dents.
Parma	Shield	0	Small round shield. Blocks range-1 attacks. Falls off at 2 dents.
Manica	Armor (arm)	1	Arm guard. Falls off at 3 dents.
Galea	Armor (head)	3	Heavy helm. Falls off at 4 dents.
Cassis	Armor (head)	1	Light helm. Falls off at 3 dents.

Every champion also has an unarmed attack, a kick or a punch: range 1, 1 blood.

Playing a Round

A bout lasts 6 rounds. Each round has 6 seconds, and every second follows the same five steps.

Start of the round

1. Advance the round marker.
2. Refresh your deck if it's short. Under 6 cards? Shuffle your discard pile back in.
3. Build your hand. Choose 6 cards from your deck: your plan for the round. Cards on your track stay put.
4. Pay Arma (gear) upkeep. Pay the water icons on your Arma; you may shed pieces first, for good.

Each second

> CHOOSE → SHOW → ACT → BURN → REPEAT
>
> This is the heartbeat of the game. You'll do it 36 times a bout, and it soon becomes second nature.

Choose

Pick a card in secret, face down. When all have chosen, call "Parati!" You must play one every second.

Show

Reveal at once, pay your card's water cost, and put it on your track in the column matching its heat.

Act

Starting with the first player and going clockwise, each player takes a turn. On your turn:

1. Use your cards. Every face-up card on your burn-down track is active. Take the action each one shows for its current column, in any order. You may skip any of them.
2. Use your champion's special, if you haven't this round. See The Champions.
3. Rally and/or Change your Arma (gear) at the edge. If you start your turn there, discard a card from your hand, face down, to Rally (gain your rally value in water) and/or Change your Arma. You still play your card. Rally once a round; crawlers always may.

Burn

Slide every card on your track one column to the right, and discard any card that slides off the end.

Repeat

Pass the first player marker to the right. Next second.

End of the round

After the sixth second, the crowd has its say. Whoever holds the center hex gains 1 glory. Every fighter standing on an edge hex loses 1 glory. Then start the next round.

> The burn-down track is the heart of the game
>
> A new card never covers up an old one. A Redoppio (Triple Strike) you played two seconds ago is still swinging; a Prosilire (Lunge) moves this second and attacks the next. Stacking cards so their actions land in the same second is how you build combos.

Combat

Attack cards bring the maneuver; your weapons bring the range and the blood.

Attacking

When you use an attack action, say what you're doing: "[Attack name] [Weapon name]!", like "Punctim gladio!" Then declare your target and give them a chance to defend. Every attack pairs with one source:

- A weapon in one of your hands. It sets the range and how much blood the attack spills.
- Your unarmed attack: a kick or a punch at range 1 for 1 blood. Every champion always has it, even with a weapon in each hand.

Each source attacks at most once per second. With a gladius and a shield, that's one sword attack and one kick a second; with two weapons, one attack per hand plus one kick.

Defending

When you're attacked, you choose how to answer, attack by attack.

- Block with Arma (gear). Block with a shield or armor piece. The attack is stopped and the Arma takes 1 dent. When a piece reaches its dent limit it falls off: remove it from your Arma. Arma that falls off is gone for the fight.
- Use a defense card on your burn-down track. Devitare (Duck) evades every high attack this second and Salire (Jump) every low one. Defendere (Parry) and Corona (Crown Guard) each stop one attack. Eludere (Dodge) stops one attack and moves you one hex, trying to get out of range.
- Take the hit and lose blood equal to the attack's blood.

Going prone

Take 3 or more blood in one second and you're knocked prone. A Trudere (Shove) or a rete hit also knocks you prone. A prone fighter wastes their next second getting up: they discard their card face down, and they cannot attack, defend or move. A discarded card does nothing and costs no water. The exception is KIP-UP, below.

Surge Festina (Kip-Up) negates prone entirely. If KIP-UP is in play when you go prone, prone is negated and no second is wasted. If you play KIP-UP face up as your card in the second you're prone, prone is negated and play continues normally.

Second wind

Once per bout, when damage would take you to zero blood, the crowd roars you back: you stay in at half your maximum blood (rounded down, minimum 1). Mark the box on your mat when you use it.

Conceding: missio

While prone, you may raise a finger (ad digitum) to concede the bout and ask for missio. Every other player shows a thumb at the same moment. Each thumb up gives you 1 glory; thumbs down give nothing. The concession stands either way.

Example: a wicked combo

Second 2. Rufus plays Redoppio (Triple Strike), heat 3. It attacks this second and the next two.

Second 3. Redoppio slides to the 2-heat column and attacks again. Rufus also plays Trudere (Shove), which shoves from the 2-heat column. On his turn (each second) he swings Redoppio with his gladius; Drusa blocks with her scutum, which takes a dent. Rufus uses his special to kick (Punctim, unarmed) for 1 blood. Last, he shoves: Drusa is pushed one hex and knocked prone, and Trudere scores its glory.

Second 4. Drusa is prone and wastes the second. Trudere, now in the 1-heat column, moves Rufus into the hex she left, Redoppio swings a third time, and the gladius lands for 2 blood. Redoppio scores its glory for the hit.

Tip: shove last. The shove pushes your target a hex away, out of reach of anything else you had left that second.

Water, Glory and Crawling

Water keeps you fighting. Glory wins the bout. The two pull you to opposite ends of the arena.

Water

Most cards cost water, shown as drops in the top-right corner. You pay when you play the card, as soon as it's revealed, not when it burns off. Arma (gear) costs its upkeep at the start of every round.

Refill at the edge of the arena: if you start your turn (each second) at the edge, discard a card from your hand, face down, to Rally (gain water equal to your champion's rally value). You may rally at most once per round; a crawler can always rally.

Crawling: out of water

If your water reaches zero, you start crawling at the end of that second.

- The cards in your hand become crawl cards: discard one a second and pay nothing. Cards already on your track do nothing, but keep burning down.
- Your only action is to move one hex a second toward the edge.
- At the edge, rally (get water) and/or change your Arma (gear). A crawler can always rally, even after rallying earlier in the round. Then rejoin the fight.
- Attacking a crawling fighter costs the attacker 1 glory. The crowd hates it.

Glory

Every card with a star is worth 1 glory, scored each time the card does its job. Burning off scores nothing.

You gain or lose	When
+1 per landed attack	An attack card scores its glory each time its attack lands, weapon or unarmed. Redoppio (Triple Strike) can score up to 3.
+1	Trudere (Shove) scores when its shove lands.
+1 per stopped attack	A defense card scores its glory each time it stops an attack.
+1	A flourish scores when you play it, but not when it's discarded while crawling.
+1	Holding the center hex at the end of a round.
−1	Standing on an edge hex at the end of a round.
−1	Attacking a crawling fighter.

The Champions

Four fighters, four styles. Each has one special ability, usable once per round.

Champion	Water	Blood	Rally	Special (once per round)
Rufus the Ox. The brute.	26	14	12	Punctim (Stab) as an additional action.
Drusa the Wall. The veteran.	24	12	10	Defendere (Parry) as an additional action: stop one attack.
Cassius the Peacock. The showman.	24	10	8	+1 glory for a flourish played within reach of an opponent.
Vela the Eel. The swift.	22	8	8	Eludere (Dodge) one attack: stop it, then move one hex trying to get out of range.

Every champion's unarmed attack is range 1, 1 blood.

Within reach means an opponent is within range of one of your weapons, or of your unarmed attack. A special is never required: you may save it or skip it.

Advanced Rules

You've got the basics. These three optional modules add tactical depth. Add any one, any two, or all three; each works on its own.

Module	What changes
Weapon arcs	Weapons hit only the hexes in their arc.
Shield arcs	Shields and armor block only attacks from the hexes they cover.
Corner rally	You rally and change Arma (gear) only on the six corner hexes.

Facing

Either arc module brings in facing. Each fighter faces one hex direction, and movement is relative to it: forward, back and to the sides. You may turn 60° as a free action at any time during your turn (each second); the Rotare (Wheel) card turns you 120°. An attack from one of the three hexes behind you comes from behind.

Weapon arcs

- A weapon hits the forward hex and the hex on its hand's side, a 60° arc. A range-2 weapon such as the trident hits the hexes two away in the same wedge.
- Unarmed attacks and Trudere (Shove) reach only the forward hex.

Shield arcs

Arma (gear)	Covers
Parma	60°: forward and its hand's side.
Scutum	120°: forward, its hand's side and the rear hex on that side.
Manica	60°: forward and the sword-arm side.
Galea, cassis	360°: every direction, the rear included.

No shield covers the rear hex. Only a helm can block an attack from behind.

Corner rally

You may rally, and change your Arma (gear), only on the six corner hexes of the arena, not anywhere on the wall. Out of water, you crawl toward the nearest corner. The other rally rules still apply.

> When to add corner rally
>
> Corner rally makes water scarce: fighters crawl far more often. Add it once your table manages water well and wants a harder fight.

Questions and Answers

The questions everyone asks.

My cards are stacking up on the burn-down track. Do new ones cover the old ones?

No. Every face-up card on the track is active. Take their actions in any order, and skip any you don't want. That's how you get wicked combos.

When do I pay water for a card?

When you play it: as soon as it's revealed, before anyone acts. Plan ahead.

Can I block with Arma (gear) that has taken its last dent?

No. Arma (gear) that reaches its dent limit falls off and is gone for the fight. Changing your Arma at the edge doesn't bring it back.

Does a kick score glory?

Yes. Glory comes from the card, not the weapon: an attack card scores its glory whenever its attack lands, whatever you hit with.

Can I rally twice in one round?

No, at most once per round, unless you're crawling: a crawler can always rally.

Do I have to use my champion's special?

No. It's usable once per round, but you can save it or skip it.

What if I'm prone when my turn (each second) comes?

You waste the second getting up: discard your card face down and take no actions, unless KIP-UP is in play when you go prone or you play KIP-UP face up that second, in which case KIP-UP negates prone entirely.

Can I turn to face a different direction mid-second?

With an arc module, turn 60° for free at any time during your turn (each second). The Rotare (Wheel) card turns you 120°.

What's in a Name

Every name in this game comes from Latin and the arena: the historian's terms for how gladiators fought, the arms and armor they carried, and the words the crowd heard.

The title

- Sanguis et Harena (SAHN-gwis et hah-REH-nah) means "blood and sand." Harena is Latin for sand: the sand strewn across the arena floor to soak up blood. Arena itself comes from harena.

The steel: Roman weapons

- Gladius (GLAH-dee-us): the short sword of the Roman legionary, built for the thrust in close ranks.
- Sica (SEE-kah): the curved blade of Thrace and Dacia, carried in the arena by the thraex (THRAY-eks) gladiator.
- Trident and rete (REH-tay): the signature kit of the retiarius (reh-tee-AH-ree-us), the "net-man," who fought with trident (fuscina, fus-KEE-nah) and weighted net (rete), no helmet, no shield.

The defense: Roman armor

- Scutum (SKOO-tum): the great curved rectangular shield of the legions.
- Parma (PAHR-mah): the small round shield of light troops, and of the thraex in the arena.
- Manica (mah-NEE-kah): the segmented arm guard. Gladiators wore it on the sword arm; the retiarius wore it on the exposed left.
- Galea (gah-LAY-ah) and cassis (KAS-sis): Latin for helmet, heavy and light. The cassis was the plain bronze cap with no crest, exactly what Rufus wears on his cards.

The moves: Latin card names

- Celeriter (keh-LEH-rih-ter): to move or react quickly.
- Recedere (reh-keh-DEH-reh): to draw back, to retreat.
- Declinare (deh-klih-NAH-reh): to turn aside, swerve, or deflect a blow.
- Procedere (proh-keh-DEH-reh): to advance, to go forward.
- Lumber: the one card that kept its plain English name.
- Circumire (kir-koo-MEE-reh): to go around, to circle.
- Rotare (roh-TAH-reh): to turn, to wheel.

- Punctim (POONK-tim): thrusting or stabbing with the point, the Roman swordplay's primary method.
- Sub Ferire (sub feh-REE-reh): to strike from below.
- Ictus Desuper (IK-tus deh-SOO-per): a blow from above.
- Redoppio (reh-DOH-pyoh): the redoubled cut, strike and strike again. The deck's Italian holdover, from the Bolognese tradition.
- Trudere (TROO-deh-reh): to thrust or shove.
- Devitare (deh-vih-TAH-reh): to dodge, duck, or evade.
- Eludere (eh-LOO-deh-reh): to elude, dodge, or baffle an attack.
- Salire (sah-LEE-reh): to jump.
- Defendere (deh-fen-DEH-reh): to defend.
- Circumversio (kir-koom-VER-see-oh): to swing a sword in a circular motion.
- Salvete (sal-VEH-tay): be well, salutations. The plural greeting you say to a crowd.
- Surge Festina (SUR-gay feh-STEE-nah): to get up quickly.
- Prosilire (proh-sih-LEE-reh): to lunge.
- Ritirata (ree-tee-RAH-tah): the retreat, strike then withdraw in good order. The deck's other Italian name.
- Defendere et Percutere (deh-fen-DEH-reh et per-koo-TEH-reh): to defend and strike back.
- Corona (koh-ROH-nah): Latin for crown. The crown guard, defend with style.

The champions: Roman names

- Rufus (ROO-fus): a common Roman cognomen meaning "red-haired." Half the legions seemed to have one.
- Cassius (KAS-ee-us): one of the great Roman gentes. A conspirator's name for a showman.
- Drusa (DROO-sah): the feminine form of Drusus, a proud Roman cognomen borne by generals and emperors' kin.
- Vela (VEH-lah): Latin for "sails." She moves like a reed in the wind; the name is our invention, but the Latin is real.

The arena: words of the games

- Pompa (POHM-pah): the pre-fight parade that showed the gladiators to the crowd up close before the fight.

- Salvete Gladiatores (sal-VEH-tay glah-dee-ah-TOH-rays) / Morituri te salutamus (moh-rih-TOO-ree tay sah-loo-TAH-mus): the editor's greeting (Greetings, gladiators) and the fighters' reply (We who are about to die salute you).
- Ad digitum (ad DIH-gih-tum): raising a finger to concede and ask for mercy.
- Missio (MISS-ee-oh): the editor's grant of mercy or dismissal from the fight.
- Pollice verso (POHL-lih-keh VER-soh): the turning of the thumb, the crowd's vote on a conceding fighter. Up means spare, down means finish.
- Ludus Magnus (LOO-dus MAHG-nus): the great school for the Colosseum, where gladiators trained and lived.
- Arma (AR-mah): arms, the weapons and armor a fighter carries. Your kit or loadout: the gear you equip at setup and can change at the edge.
- Aqua, Sanguis, Gloria (AH-kwah, SAHN-gwis, GLOH-ree-ah): water, blood, glory. The three measures of a fight.
- Humus (HOO-mus): earth, land, ground. The sand under your feet.
- Subrepo (sub-REH-poh): to crawl on the ground. What a fighter does when the water runs out.
